Mutual Confession

Read: James 5:13-18

Confessing faults means to admit weaknesses and to acknowledge failures in our Christian lives. It is often difficult to get Christians to do this, despite the clear counsel of God's Word. It goes against the grain to display an image of oneself that is anything less than perfect. Many Christians fear that they will be rejected by others if they admit to any faults. But nothing could be more destructive to authentic Christian fellowship and body life than the practice of pretending not to have any problems.

Many Christian families are suffering with conflict, sickness, dysfunctional behavior, addictions, pain, employment problems, and the like — yet those same families project an image of warm and fuzzy, idyllic Christian perfection. To make matters worse, this tragic conspiracy of silence is regarded as the Christian thing to do, and the hypocrisy it presents to the outside world is considered a necessary part of a family's witness. How helpful and healing it would be if our Christian families — and our collective church family — would honestly confess the pain and problems that exist so that restoration can take place.

This kind of honesty would also be helpful and healing to families. People need to hear that other Christians have the same kinds of problems. They need to hear other Christians say, I really admire your honesty in sharing this issue, and your courage in taking this step toward healing. They need to have their issues and problems mirrored back to them by other believers, so that they can see their own problems more clearly. They need to receive the counsel and prayers of other believers so that the healing power of God can be released in their midst.

Whenever spiritual awakenings have occurred throughout Christian history, they have always been accompanied by a restoration of koinonia-fellowship, including the confession of faults. During the Wesleyan awakening in eighteenth century England, the great evangelist George Whitefield wrote to his converts: My brethren ... let us plainly and freely tell one another what God has done for our souls. To this end you would do well, as others have done, to form yourselves into little companies of four or five each, and meet once a week to tell each other what is in your hearts; that you may then also pray for and comfort each other as need shall require. None but those who have experienced it can tell the unspeakable advantages of such a union and communion of souls.

Pray for the World

Lord, many countries have in the past two months experienced devastating floods, which have destroyed home, decimated businesses, and taken lives. We pray for the comfort of all who have suffered these losses, and the necessary aid for the rebuilding of their lives. Guide and help the respective governments to act swiftly, and be with all working hard to restore utilities and supplies to the affected people. Let us unaffected by these desires not be indifferent to the suffering of these people, and show us what we may do to support them.

Pray for Singapore

Lord, we pray for our Home Team, the men and women in our armed forces, civil defence, air force, coast guard and police forces, etc. who daily work to keep our nation safe. Let all in our Home Team be men and women of unshakeable integrity, dedicated to their duties, ever prepared for any eventuality, healthy and strong. Watch over and bless their respective families, even as they watch over us. We give thanks to You – and them – for the safety and prosperity we enjoy as a nation and as citizens of this land.

Pray for SACC

Lord, we give thanks for all who take up leadership in our Parish, in big ways and small; praying for each to receive Your fresh anointing daily, to be ever uncomplainingly willing, seeking after Your will and the welfare of others before self.

We pray, Lord, that You:

1. Bless the families of our leaders, that they may all come into a deep personal relationship with You.
2. Bind our staff team in unity and love, and bless our recruitment efforts with those who share Your heart and temperament.
3. Guide our EC and CC leaders to work together in mutual understanding, support and compromise, for Your glory.
4. Watch over our two sisters currently in Pursat, Cambodia, supporting our brethren in the mission field in their Vacation Bible School.

Collect – 20th Sunday after Trinity

God, the giver of life, whose Holy Spirit wells up within your Church: by the Spirit's gifts equip us to live the gospel of Christ and make us eager to do your will, that we may share with the whole creation the joys of eternal life; through Jesus Christ your Son our Lord, who is alive and reigns with you, in the unity of the Holy Spirit, one God, now and for ever..
